

Fix our funding Stop the drop

Medical student funding in England is broken. Help us campaign for you to retain your entitlement to full student finance maintenance funding throughout your years of study.

Complete our survey on how unfair funding is affecting YOU.

Since 2012, financial support for medical students has plummeted, and students in England have been worst affected.

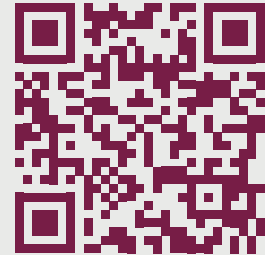

If you're a student in England, the drop in funding when you transition into NHS bursary funded years could be as much as £3,979. This is a disgrace, leaving far too many students facing financial hardship. Too many students have to take on paid work to the detriment of their studies.

It's time for the Government to step up and fix our funding once and for all. Allowing students to retain their entitlement to full student finance maintenance funding would cost the treasury £24 million – this is just 0.12% of Student Finance England's annual lendings.

If the Government is serious about getting the NHS back on its feet and increasing the number of doctors to meet patient demands – medical students must be supported and valued.

#FixOurFunding

Make yourself heard, complete our survey today.

On average, the NHS Bursary covers just a third of medical student's living costs.